How To Lead Millennials

Shared By TRUiC

Although millennials have become the most populous demographic in the American workplace, there's still some uncertainty around how to best leverage their unique skills and characteristics in a professional setting. It's no secret that millennials were raised differently than any previous generation, but it's a lesser-known fact that they need to be led differently, too. Contrary to popular opinion, most millennials are very coachable and willing to learn. They simply need to be taught and led in a manner that they'll respect and respond to. In this article, we'll discuss some of the key attributes that make millennial workers different from previous generations, some effective millennial leadership traits, and the importance of preparing the millennial generation to lead the future American workplace.

Needs of the Millennial Workforce

- 1) Feedback
- 2) Variety
- 3) Work-Life Balance
- 4) Upward Mobility
- 5) Purpose

Effective Millennial Leadership Traits

- 1) Structure & Guidance
- 2) Encouragement
- 3) Attentiveness
- 4) Opportunities for Growth
- 5) Recognition of Their Unique Skills

Incentivizing Conditions for Millennial Workers

- 1) Flexible Scheduling
- 2) Teamwork
- 3) Fun Workplace Atmosphere
- 4) Perks
 - Community Perks:
 - Indulgent Perks:
 - Lifestyle Perks:
 - Convenience Perks:
 - Work Culture Perks:
- 5) Networking Opportunities

Millennials Leading Us: Developing the Future of the Workplace

- 1) More Remote Work and Flexible Hours
- 2) Eliminate the Communication Hierarchy
- 3) Increased Diversity and Inclusivity
- 4) Dealing With Technology's Future
